

Dr. Andrea Kendall-Taylor
Senior Fellow and Director, Transatlantic Security Program, CNAS

Andrea Kendall-Taylor is a Senior Fellow and Director of the Transatlantic Security Program at the Center for a New American Security. She focuses on national security challenges facing the United States and Europe, including Russia, populism, and the strength of the Transatlantic alliance. Prior to joining CNAS, Andrea served for 9 years as a senior intelligence officer. From 2015-2018 she was Deputy National Intelligence Officer for Russia and Eurasia at the National Intelligence Council (NIC) in the Office of the Director of National Intelligence. In that role Andrea led the U.S. intelligence community's production of strategic analysis on Russia, represented the IC in White House policy meetings, provided direct analytic support to the National Security Council, and advised the DNI and his senior staff on key developments and emerging issues. Prior to joining the NIC, Andrea was a senior analyst at the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) where she focused on Russia and Eurasia, the political dynamics of autocracies, and democratic decline.

Dr. Kendall-Taylor is also an adjunct professor at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service. Her work has been published in numerous political science journals, including the Journal of Peace Research, Democratization, and Journal of Democracy, as well as Foreign Affairs, the Washington Post, the Washington Quarterly, and Foreign Policy. Dr. Kendall-Taylor received her B.A. in politics from Princeton University and her Ph.D. in political science from the University of California, Los Angeles. She was also a Fulbright scholar in Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan, where she conducted her dissertation research.